12 Ghost Towns and Mining Camps

Ghost towns and mining camps are townsites often but not always associated with mining that have lost all of their population. They vary on how much there is to see, from a collection of abandoned buildings to as little as a small cemetery or just a foundation or two. Although they exist in the eastern United States, they are much more common in the western United States – Nevada has more ghost towns than populated towns. There are a number of near ghost towns, where most of the population has left, but I do not include these here.
